

Access Global NewsBank: 2022 Edition

A global research collection that supports all academic disciplines

Quick Facts

Features thousands of primary sources and a unique combination of global and local news coverage

Allows users to track trends over time or geographically while comparing differing perspectives

Combines all news formats - full-text newspapers, web-only content, PDF image editions, and others - for superior search results

“Users can pinpoint information, compare diverse views, and track subjects geographically and over time through a deep global news archive.”

Overview

Access Global NewsBank: 2022 Edition is designed to deliver broad and varied perspectives from sources across the globe. This resource supports research across a wide range of subject areas, including Political Science, Journalism, History, Environmental Studies, Sociology, Economics, Education, Business, Health, Social Sciences and more. It is the most comprehensive collection of its kind, with more than 7,200 global news sources covering over 200 countries and territories.

Around the globe and around the corner

Access Global NewsBank's unique blend of global and local news sources makes for a powerful research tool. Users can easily conduct background research; compare and analyze differing views on the same topic; track events over time; and prepare for class discussions, speeches, debates, research papers and dissertations.

Multiple News Formats – One Interface

The world of news is continuously evolving. While in the past news was primarily delivered in print, today it is published in a wide variety of formats. The 2022 Edition combines all formats – full-text articles, web-only content, PDF image editions – in a single interface providing researchers with seamless access to deep, comprehensive local coverage.

All NewsBank resources are remotely accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, on any device.

For more information on this and other NewsBank collections, call 1.802.875.2910 (Outside U.S. and Canada), email sales@newsbank.com or visit www.newsbank.com

